

ELLE

November 21, 2014

Beauty

YOTEL X HABIT COSMETICS

Mini shampoos, travel-size conditioners and bars of soap so small and adorable we can't help but want to take them home with us: these are the usual array you can expect to find lining the bathroom shelves at your standard hotel. But hotel chain Yotel are anything but standard, so they're making nail polish.

The Yotel pod hotel chain has recently launched its collaboration with vegan nail polish brand Habit Cosmetics to create two custom color laquers, for sale at their New York hotel. A moody mauve and chic shimmering silver, the nail polishes are custom-crafted to match the hotel's opalescent interiors and pretty purple suites.

For Yotel NYC, which is situated near the touristy Times Square, an area notable for its stylish and cosmopolitan populous, having high-end beauty products on hand for guests seems wonderfully logical.

We love this addition to the conventional list of amenities, and, as Habit is known for their chemical-free nail care products, the Yotel colours are not only good for the post-flight mani, but also for the environment and your nails.

The nail polish is vegan, cruelty-free and gluten-free and consists of two shades, namely Lush (deep purple) and Sunset Boulevard (the shimmery grey).

A worthy addition to hotel amenities? We think so! Do you? What beauty products would you like to see standard at SA hotels? Leave your comment below.

Find out more about Yotel, here.

Find out more about Habit Cosmetics, here.